

Mutiya Vision's Bio

In the course of 40 short years award winning children's book author Mutiya Vision has become a beacon of hope and inspiration. She has attained success against all odds, reminding us that with vision, determination, belief in self, and planning, all things are possible.

From an early age Mutiya faced mountainous challenges ranging from being a member of the "differently-abled" community, to the emotional and physical trauma of being the child of an alcoholic mother who struggled with depression. Mutiya was born with one hand and fought to maintain her dignity, define herself and create her place in a world that labeled her as disabled, seeing her as incomplete, or as a less valued member of society. She saw the destructive effects not mastering your own universe can have, and took charge of her life accordingly.

Mutiya has overcome adversity, refusing to continue the cycle of victimization, poverty, teen pregnancy, neglect, alcohol addiction and the foster care system. She chose to create a life of fulfillment as a wife, mother of 7, author, educator, activist and the CEO of Vision Works Publishing. She also created multiple forums in which she coaches others, on how they can do the same in their own lives.

At an early age Mutiya recognized her power to communicate and influence those around her in a positive way. She saved her mother's life twice- once when she was 7 years old from suicide, and again at 15. When Mutiya became a peer counselor in high school, she recognized that many of her family's turbulent experiences were related to her mom's alcohol abuse. She arranged to take her mom to an Alcoholic Anonymous meeting. Shortly after her intervention, her mom checked into a residential substance abuse program. Her mom is alive today and maintained her sobriety for over 20 years.

Mutiya attributes her own success to her ability to convert tragedy into triumph, implement dreams and her inability to accept failure as a final destination. Her heroes are the two most influential people in her life, her mother Rahil and husband David. Her mom gave her the gift of resilience, work ethic and the value of education. She nurtured Mutiya's creativity, allowed her to express herself, and encouraged her to convert her emotional pain into writings of strength and beauty. Mutiya's mom loved and believed in her, more than she loved and believed in herself. She built on her mother's "good examples" and chose to avoid the pitfalls of her mother's issues with addiction.

Her husband David gave Mutiya the gift of stability, support, intellectual/spiritual stimulus and provides a continuous source for creative challenge. David helped Mutiya build a strong foundation for their family that provided a platform from which she and their 7 children could soar and attain success.

Today, Mutiya is a college graduate, homeowner, business owner, workshop facilitator, and the co-author of ten character building children's books written with her husband. She is fulfilling her purpose, living an extraordinary life of her choosing, while being a positive resource to her community and the nation.

Mutiya's grateful to those who nurtured and inspired her success along the way with priceless contributions. She demonstrates her appreciation by giving back. Mutiya actively volunteers her time and celebrity to inspire economically disadvantaged children. Her sole purpose is to show youth how to overcome the obstacles in their lives, by taking destiny into their own hands. She's particularly fond of working with an organization called Women In Need, which rescued Mutiya and her mom when she was 15 and faced the horrifying reality of being one of America's homeless families.
